Vitamin C is a water-soluble vitamin that can easily be expelled from the organism through urination when it is not necessary. What happens when you have too much vitamin C or too little vitamin C? Vitamin C is a water-soluble vitamin that can be easily expelled from the organism through urination when it is not necessary. Since women in pregnancy, which breastfeed, who smoke or use oral contraceptives have lower vitamin C blood levels than others, can be needed greater than vitamin C to achieve optimal results in these people. Therefore, if the main source of vitamin C comes from natural foods, it is almost impossible that the excess of vitamin C produces side effects. Also known as ascorbic acid, vitamin C is fundamental to live in a healthy way. Photo Courtesy: Catherine Falls Commercial / Moment / Getty Images Because foods rich in vitamin C are today so easily available, even in the United States the symptoms of an inadequate supply of vitamin C are rare. Because vitamin C is fundamental for body detoxification, a lack of vitamin C can compromise the immune system and make a person more susceptible to diseases Infections. It also acts as a powerful antioxidant and can repair free radical damage, which are linked to a otubrocs .otubrocs emoc otacidni `A aznerac c animativ evarg enoizammafini otams otams otolobedni enoizilomed ollep alla exrolod li eracifroloditna idvili elicaf aimena actiaf id ocitena azzelobed :iuc art ,opmet len C animativ id aznerac id imotnis eratnemireps onossop hirtunlam iudividni ilg ,aivattuT .airatnas aznetsissa id irotinrof orol iad otadnamoccar emoc .iloccip `Aip o idnary `Aip oiggasod id illevil eredeihcir ehcna onossop ilautta o itnedecerp ehcidem inoizidnoc onnah ehc oroloC .aittalam alled .Atilibarenluc v iteFFE
